Peter was a Jewish businessman from Capernaum

A BUSTLING PORT welcomed visitors to the prosperous village of Capernaum in Jesus' time, as drawn by archaeological draftsman Leen Ritmeyer. A 2,500-foot-long promenade lined the shore. Boats moored along the harbor's array of paired curved piers, straight docks and triangular piers. The remains of these unusually shaped piers are still visible during dry seasons. In the photo (lower left), one pier juts into the sea just south of Capernaum's red-domed Greek Orthodox church.

Capernaum's synagogue, where Jesus preached (John 6:59), appears at upper left in the drawing, where it is shown with three doors and a raised central roof with an arched motif at one end. The building identified since the fourth century as the home of the apostle Peter lies between the synagogue and the harbor. According to Matthew 8:14-16 and Mark 2:1, Jesus lodged here. The home consists of several small rooms built around two central courtyards.

The ancient harbor extended from the area now owned by the Franciscan church, at left in the aerial photo (lower right), to the Greek Orthodox church at right.
